

Abstract of the Disclosure

A method transmits a video over a network as a bit stream of packets. Real-time feedback information on conditions of the network is received while transmitting the packets. A probability of packet loss is based on the real-time feedback. Then, redundant packets are generated for selected packets of the bit stream if the probability of packet loss is greater than a predetermined threshold.